LONDON: THOMAS HODGSON, 13, PATEHNOSTER. ROW. Ann Sosa or ALL Booxssnnsas. LITERARY NOTICES. Preparing for Publication, ct-c., c. Tm: LATE MR. Wu. I srLoR.---It is with sincere regret that we have to notice the melancholy death of this gentleman, who filled an important situation in the well-known house of Siinpkim, Marshall, and Co. In the world of letters he was unknown; but his fame amongst the booksellers and publishers of the metropolis was universally acknowledged as unrivalled in remembering nearly every work that has issued from the press for years; hence his services were nearly invaluable in a house like Messrs. Simpkin s. They, however, were not the exclusively benefited parties, as all who had occasion to seek information such as he could give, received it with a cheerfulness and urbanity of manner, which was the more remarkable from its extreme rarity. It appears that he was drowned, whilst bathing in the Thames, on the 27th of June, and, as soon as the intelligence had been conveyed to those whose faithful servant he had been for twenty-five years, they closed their establishment. We have heard that since his death numbers of letters have been founcl, proving that the needy in his own trade always found a silent friend that responded to...
